Seth and Sarah Bardo

The 1982 edition of the Pot Pourri is dedicated to Sarah and Seth Bardo. Through their concern for the environment, they have participated in organizing New Englanders for Peace and have spread their concern throughout the P.A. community. We encourage students to join with the Bardos in the campaign for nuclear disarmament in the coming years — it's our future! Congratulations Sarah and Seth on a fantastic first year at Andover.

HOLY THURSDAY

Is this a holy thing to see,
 In a rich and fruitful land,
 Babes reduced to misery,
 Fed with cold and usurous hand?

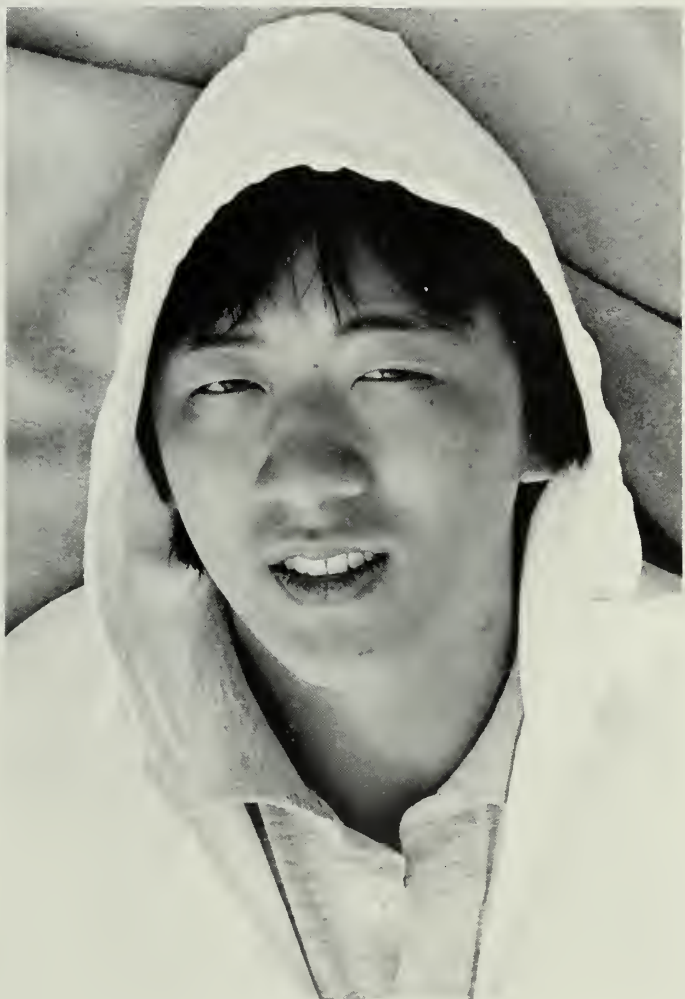

Is that trembling cry a song?
 Can it be a song of joy?
 And so many children poor?
 It is a land of poverty!

And their sun does never shine.
 And their fields are bleak & bare.
 And their ways are fill'd with thorns,
 It is eternal winter there.

For where-e'er the sun does shine,
 And where-e'er the rain does fall,
 Babe can never hunger there,
 Nor poverty the mind appall.

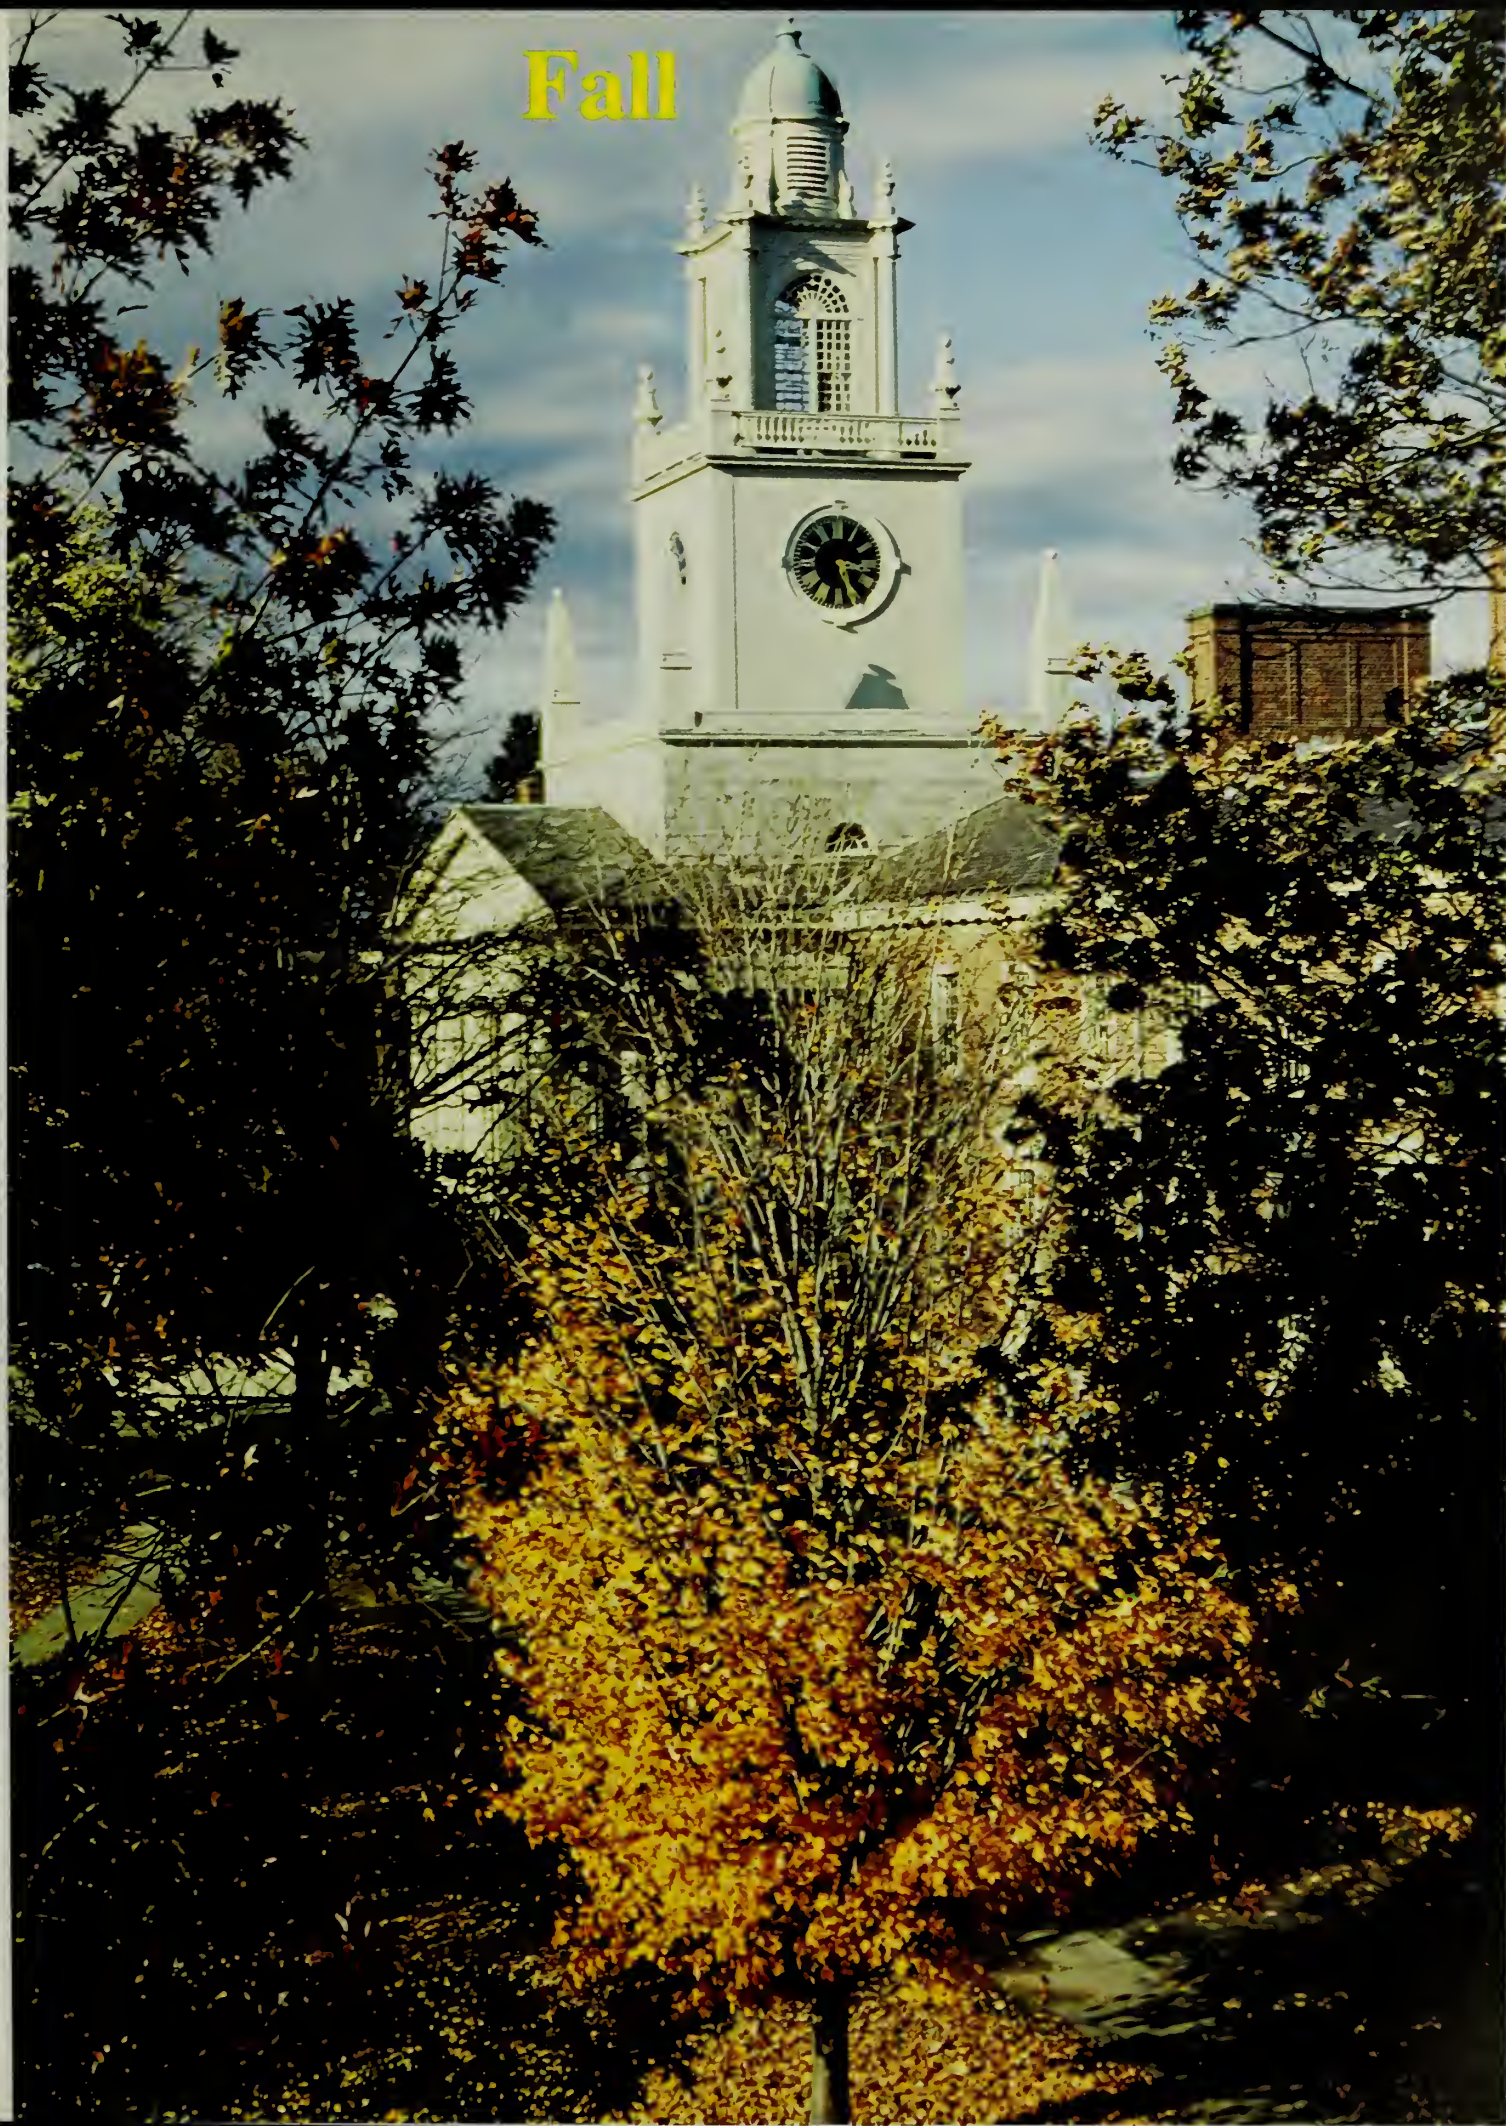

What's a nice girl like you doing in a place like this?

SWIMMING

This year was one marked by success. The girl's team compiled an undefeated 9-0-1 season record capped off by a third place finish at the Interschols. They continuously rolled over opponents, dominating the whole season, including beating Maine powerhouse Cape Elizabeth for the first time in history. In addition to a strong group of returning letterwomen, led by captain Patti Doykos, the team was helped by standouts Edna Wong, Susan Deer, "Sexy Eyes" McGillivray, and Washburn award winner Suzy Kito, and coached by Diane Souvaine and Sarah Gates.

Chuckles and his Australian sidekick David Thomas coached a boy's team whose number of wins was low but whose spirit was high. Led by seniors Kevin Bates, Mike Terry, and Gordy Goldstein, the team continuously did better than expected, culminating by nearly upsetting a heavily favored N.M.H. team 84-82 in the best performance by an Andover team in recent years. Captain Scott Malcolm finished the season in fine form, winning the New England Championships in the 100yd. breaststroke and setting a new record of :59.06.

There was a certain closeness between the two teams this year, for the first time in a few years. This made the long trips easier, and meets a little louder, thanks to Jane's yell. Between Sexy eyes and Puppy eyes, Scott had his hands full. I guess you're all alone next year, Chuckles! We'll miss the others.

(li mik' ə ləs) adj. dwelling in mud or muddy regions

Dredging the river disturbed all the limicolous creatures along the banks.

P.A. on a Saturday night — usually pretty dull: the movie, a dance, sometimes a party ... So spring term passes and the last weekend in upon us. Of course, it's raining — what else is new. We trudge over to the U-Room only because Youth in Asia is playing, expecting the same old routine; crowds of people slam-dancing in a dark, steamy room. After arriving soaked, we guzzle Mr. Carter's warm lemonade and prepare our ears for volume. Inside there are lots of uneasy people pretending to be having a good time. Up front it's too violent. In a corner some poor soul just spewed his night's consumption. On the couch I couldn't tell if the people were asleep or just looked that way.

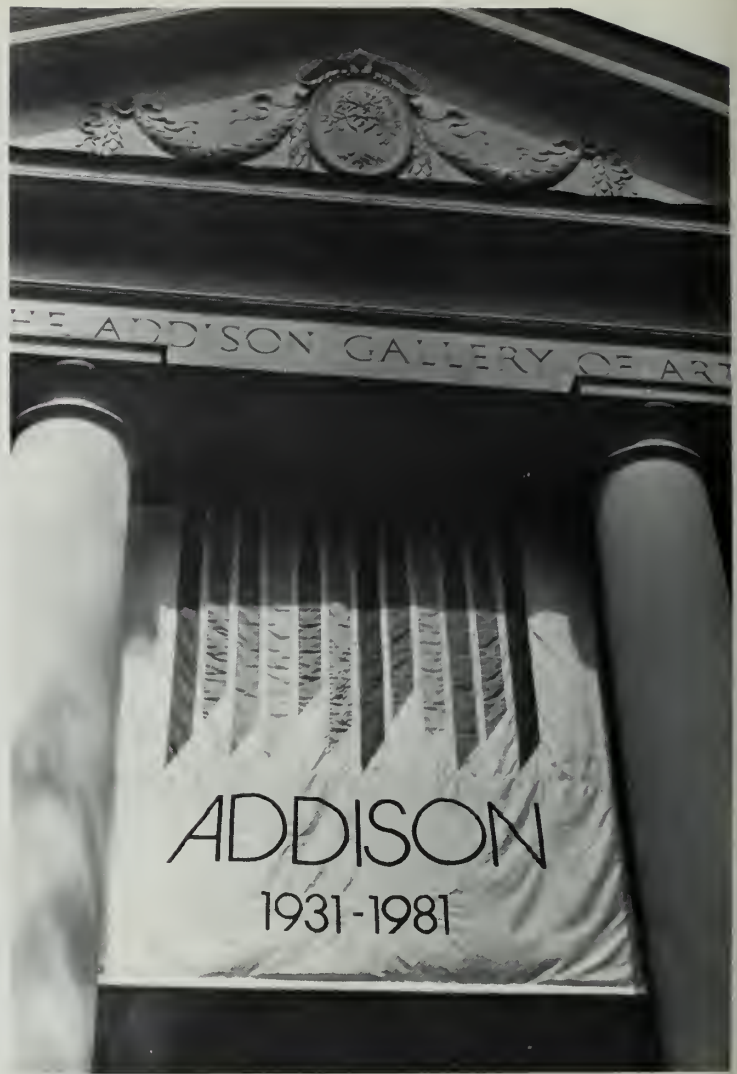

A crowd begins to form outside reliving the old Fred Astair movie; dancing, singing — it's all the same when its raining. But it happens differently this time. Shoes and shirts come off; pants are rolled up. It soon gets cold in the rain and we have to put something on to keep warm — what else but MUD! The first person to stumble and fall down the hill set a trend in Andover dancing much to the Cluster Deans' dismay. Mud sliding, mud wrestling, mud flinging, and lots of muddy, uninhibited people — the ultimate finale to spring. The most venturesome find some form of cleansing in Rabbit Pond; the rest clog their shower drains. Thanks Y.I.A.!

GRADUATION '82

RIDIN'

Hi! What's it like sittin' out there, listenin' to all this ceremony and ritual? What's it like to know that tomorrow you'll get your diplomas and be free at last? I've tried to imagine for myself lotsa times. This is my first Baccalaureat too, even though I was a student here once, just like you are now. Thing is, I never made it quite this far, even though I came real close. See while you're sittin' here dozin', daydreamin', or even listenin', my family and me are somewhere between toll plazas on the New Jersey turnpike. My parents, along with my three little sisters, came all the way up from Charlotte, North Carolina just to see me graduate, but instead they had to take delivery on a last-minute probation casualty. So, while you're sittin' here, I'm in my car ridin' home with my folks. We're cramped, but we ain't talkin' much. My sisters are sleepin' in the "way back" of the ol' Ford wagon; they're all curled, scrunched and piled over each other like little pretzels in a bag; my mom has started smokin' again — I can see her ash glow brighter and then hear her inhale and exhale in little sighs; my dad just stares straight ahead at the white dots on the road that look kinda like hyphens that suspend a sentence for awhile . . . So, while I'm just sittin' and ridin', I've got time to wonder what you're doin' sittin' here.

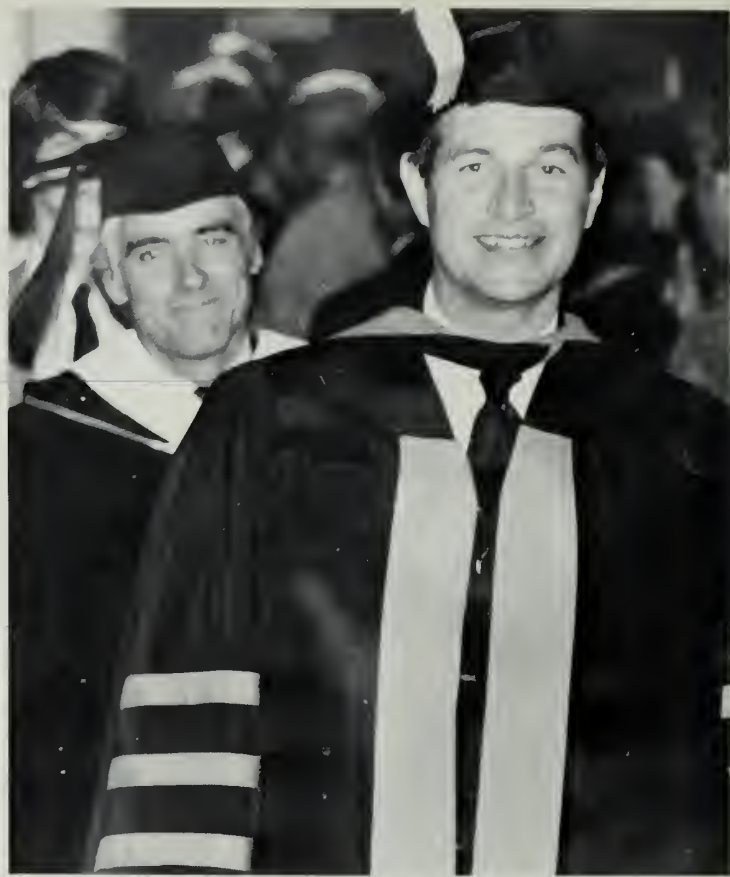

First, I'm wonderin' what this ceremony is like, 'cause I know y'all are all here and I'm not. I don't have any experience with rituals and celebrations and rites of passage. We just don't do that in our family. I mean, we ain't Jewish, so no bar mitzphas; confirmation was somethin' my dad made me do. About the only time I ever noticed any kinda progress or movement in my livin' was when I got my driver's license two years ago durin' Spring vacation. I reckon the next thing will be when I'm old enough to buy a beer legal. I know I'm gettin' older and all, but I just don't sense it happenin', and wonder if anybody else does. Maybe that's what ceremonies like this are for, to say: "Hey guy! You're gettin' somewhere, you're really makin' progress!" It's a time when you can know your life is changin', you're goin from "A" to "B". It's a time for lookin' back an' bein' proud of where you been an' a time for gearin' up for life ahead an' bein' a little anxious maybe 'bout your ability to cope. It's a time for bein' glad to be leavin' yet sad about the parts you left behind. But most of all, it's a time for thinkin'. Without rites of passage, folks often wait to think till they run into a different kinda big deal, like gettin' cancer or gettin' kicked outta school.

But I wonder if any of you is thinkin' like that. I'm in my car ridin' along back to North Carolina, an' you're sittin' here in the pews. I wonder what Ken's doin'; I wonder if my frien' Thom Brand is listenin', sleepin' or just plain absent; I wonder if David is here or buffin' his housecounselor for parietals with Kathy; I wonder if Victor is payin' attention or whisperin' stories 'bout Pollock Pines. See, I ain't too sure folks at PA ever stop to listen to anythin' except what they're supposed to listen to. I ain't too sure they ever listen in an open, kinda non-discriminatin', un-analytical way. I mean, me too, I was so busy listenin' to dates an' formulas an' powerful metaphores an' basketball plays an' friends' lies about Saturday's date, I was so busy listenin' to all that, that I just never listened to myself or thought about anythin' else. And when I wasn't doin' that kind a focussed listenin', I was just plain doin': doin' a paper, doin' a math problem, impressin' a girl, playin' a baseball game, or sneakin' a vacation inside a vodka bottle. So, I learned 'bout revolutions an' coups, zebras an' earthworms, functions an' fractions, subjunctives an' datives, dances an' parties, but I didn't learn much about myself or other real people, an' I certainly didn't learn how I learned. I's too busy!! Like Paul Simon is singin' on the radio right now in the car: "When I think back on all the crap I learned in high school, it's a wonder I can think at all." I mean, the crap is important, I reckon, but it's the thinkin' that really counts. Curiosity, discipline, strategies, writin', synthesis and all that abstract, kinda cosmic stuff, that's what counts, along with how all the "crap" ties in with real people. So, thinkin' is the most important thing you learn to do in or outta school. Ridin' in my car, I'm wonderin' if all of you sittin' at the Baccalaureat know how you think or if you just head straight down the well-worn track to college without thinkin' 'bout why you're goin' there.

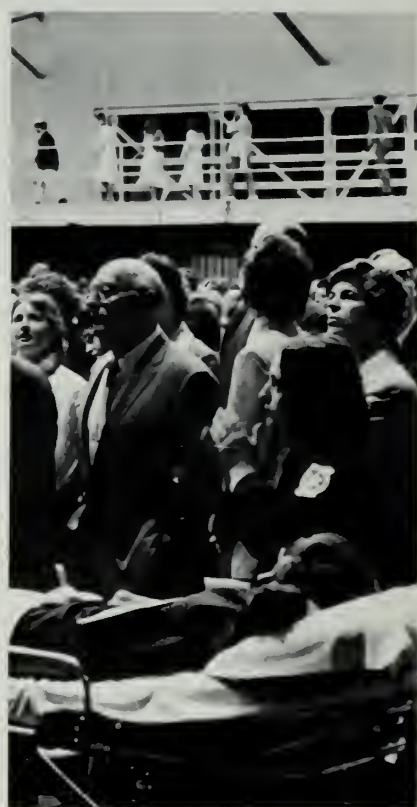

So, there's two things I'm thinkin' 'bout while I'm ridin' in my car with my folks: Rites of passage as a rare time for thinkin' and thinkin' as the key to understandin' what and why I'm doin' what I'm doin' and goin' where I'm goin'.

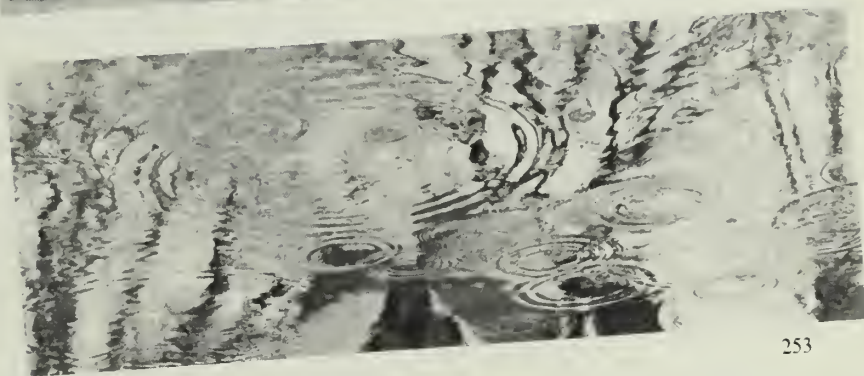

An' then, I think about tomorrow. It'll be 'bout Greensboro then for me: Two more hours from home in Charlotte and God knows how long to school at Chapel Hill. You'll be in the cage gettin' your diplomas; the ceremony will be endin'. I hope you'll find more ways to celebrate your passin' in life: Past steps are worth the pause and praise, the comin' ones deserve the preparation. An' I hope your diploma represents more than a mastery of History 35 and three years of French; I hope it represents proficiency in and lovin' for curious, contemplative thinkin'. I reckon that's one reason I didn't get a diploma. See, I didn't learn to listen and I didn't learn to think till I got into this car.

One Of These Days

When you've got the answers
all wrapped up in a brightly colored box,
Let me be there
when you pull the ribbon off.
Let me know
if what you've found
is the same as what you've dreamed
so long ago.
I love to watch you change,
I watch the colors in your face,
So like the seasons,
they give away. And in the battles we must go through it seems you find something worthwhile in them
even when you lose
So if you don't see old dreams
in the answer that you have perhaps it's best
it's not exactly as you planned.
Things get left behind
but they're not lost along the way,
they'll into something new
for you. One of these days.

Off to starboard
Laughing tricks of light that never deceive
Though she's just a child

At last swimming out of the silver trail
Leaving her shoes behind on the sand
She's a fantasy child tonight
Skimming the mirror waves
Headed out for somewhere
Won't be back for awhile."

Wait, for now.
 Distrust everything if you have to.
 But trust the hours. Haven't they carried you everywhere, up to now?
 Personal events will become interesting again.
 Hair will become interesting.
 Pain will become interesting.
 Buds that open out of season will become interesting.
 Second-hand gloves will be lovely again;
 their memories are what give them
 the need for other hands. And the desolation of lovers is the same; that enormous emptiness carved out of such tiny beings as we are asks to be filled; the need for the new love is faithfulness to the old.

Wait.
 Don't go too early.
 You're tired. But everyone's tired.
 But no one is tired enough.
 Only wait a little and listen:
 music of hair,
 music of pain,
 music of looms weaving our loves again.
 Be there to hear it, it will be the only time,
 most of all to hear
 the flute of your whole existence,
 rehearsed by the sorrows, play itself into total exhaustion.

Now we take our time — so nonchalant and spend our nights so bon vivant.
We know it's all a passing phase.
We're going wrong, we're gaining weight, we're sleeping long, and much too late.
Now as we indulge in things refined, we hide our hearts from harder times.
We'll have to change our jaded ways.
So before we end, (and then begin) — we'll drink a toast to how it's been

BARTLET REBELS!!!

Har de har har.

The news of the world: (by the world, I mean of course our own little, over-protected, private, educationally-stimulating world).

At last comes the senior Prom, but only after Black, White, or Red Monday, whichever you prefer. After the Prom comes Graduation, when Mommy and Daddy gather around you, people send you money in exchange for the invitations the School provided you with, and miracle of all miracles, Betsy Connell isn't wearing pink and green. No, you Guys, she didn't. I was on the lookout.

Then what happens? I mean, after the parties? Oh, yeah — next year's Andover/Exeter game. Everyone comes back for the first one, just to be sure everyone else is o.k. The New-England Ivy-Leaguers return the second year, perhaps, but after that, anyone who comes back out of loyalty to his Dear Old High School never should have left.

Come on! Andover is supposed to breed men! (Women too, but the word doesn't have the same effect). We don't want pansies who can't handle the real world. What we need to face the real world is BALLS! (the word again doesn't work).

After even the Hangers-on have given up trying to figure out where the football game is this year, the five-year Reunion approaches. This time, the wife, fiance, live-in, whatever, joins us in our return. (No kids yet, we'll think about them later). The class of 1982, just out of college, will spend all the money on booze that will later be spent on babysitters and Pampers. We will get smashed until we can't see the old dormitory walls. Isn't that what we've all wanted to do for the past four years?

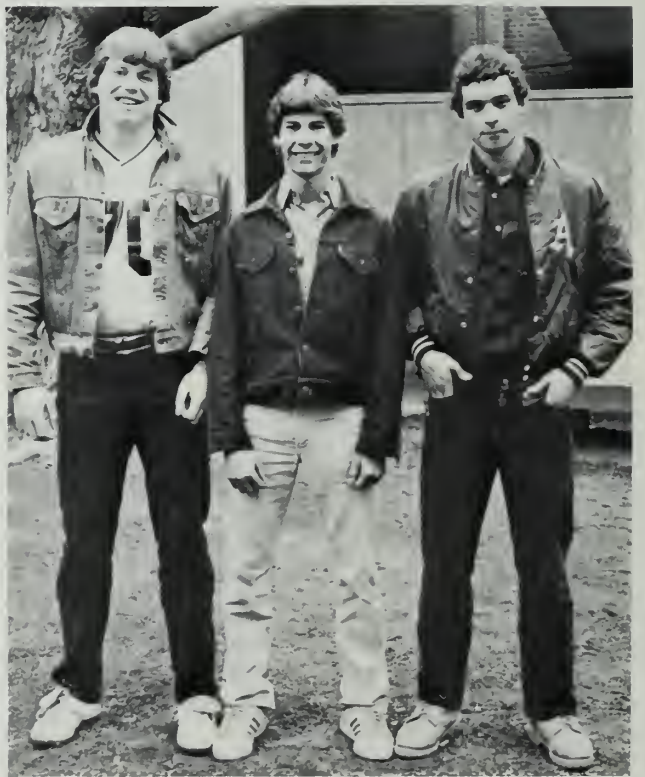

Aha. The truth comes out ...

Actually, by that time, we expect marijuana will have been legalized and we will have moved on to more adventurous escapades. What else have we always wanted to do? ... What about that orgy on Sam Phil steps? Ha ha ... Think about it, though ...

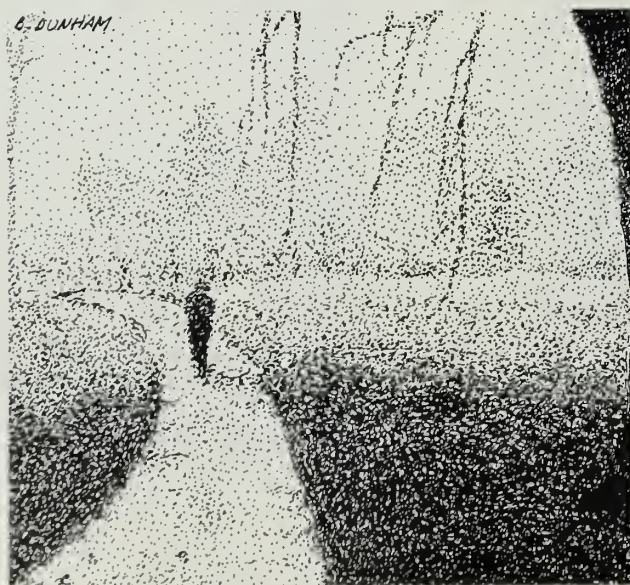

We do have to make plans. See you there ...

WILDFLOWER

... And so the question arises: where do we go from here? What comes after the Andover Experience? The Yale Experience? U-Penn? Barnard? Berkely? Mac Donald's? The desperation which burst on Black Monday is now transferred to summer plans: for some, which country to visit this year; for others, how to earn enough money to compliment college scholarships, student loans, and job opportunities. For others the desperation lies in keeping class cuts secret, the booze hidden, and the illegal parietals quiet.

There are ways — or so the faculty thinks. They still insist on thinking it won't happen, but the real, true underlying warning is: "Don't get caught!" "... Well, you see Mr. Lyons, the reason I wasn't in class is really quite valid ..." Plead insanity — the Princeton waitlist (it did ask you to wait), or a death in the family. DO NOT plead hangover. That's one of the rules of the game.

We were trying to decide where we were going. Well, Aristotle says we must go in search of our own natures. That's all very well and good, but nature seems to forget that my proper niche in this world was as a wildflower, growing on top of a hill, eternally sheltered by the warm summer sun. Alas, I was born without roots. I attended Andover. Adding the two together, it seems as though I was supposed to go somewhere. At least in this world.

I've been at P.A. for four years, attempting to "identify" myself. We all try, some even succeed. Education is precisely for that purpose. I'm afraid I've been procrastinating.

So? Who cares? I still have four years. Maybe my roots will grow. Until then, I shall just have to envy the flowers.

The Andover Inn

The half hour drive from downtown Boston will bring you to the Andover Inn, located on the campus of Philips Academy in Andover. The menu features many popular American and continental dishes. On Sundays from 4:00 to 9:00 the Dutch-Indonesian Rijsttafel is featured. This "happening" is unique for the Boston area and consists of plain white rice and approximately 20 different side dishes. The atmosphere is continental and dinner is served by candlelight. Classical piano music is performed every Monday through Saturday evening.

Generic Corn Chips

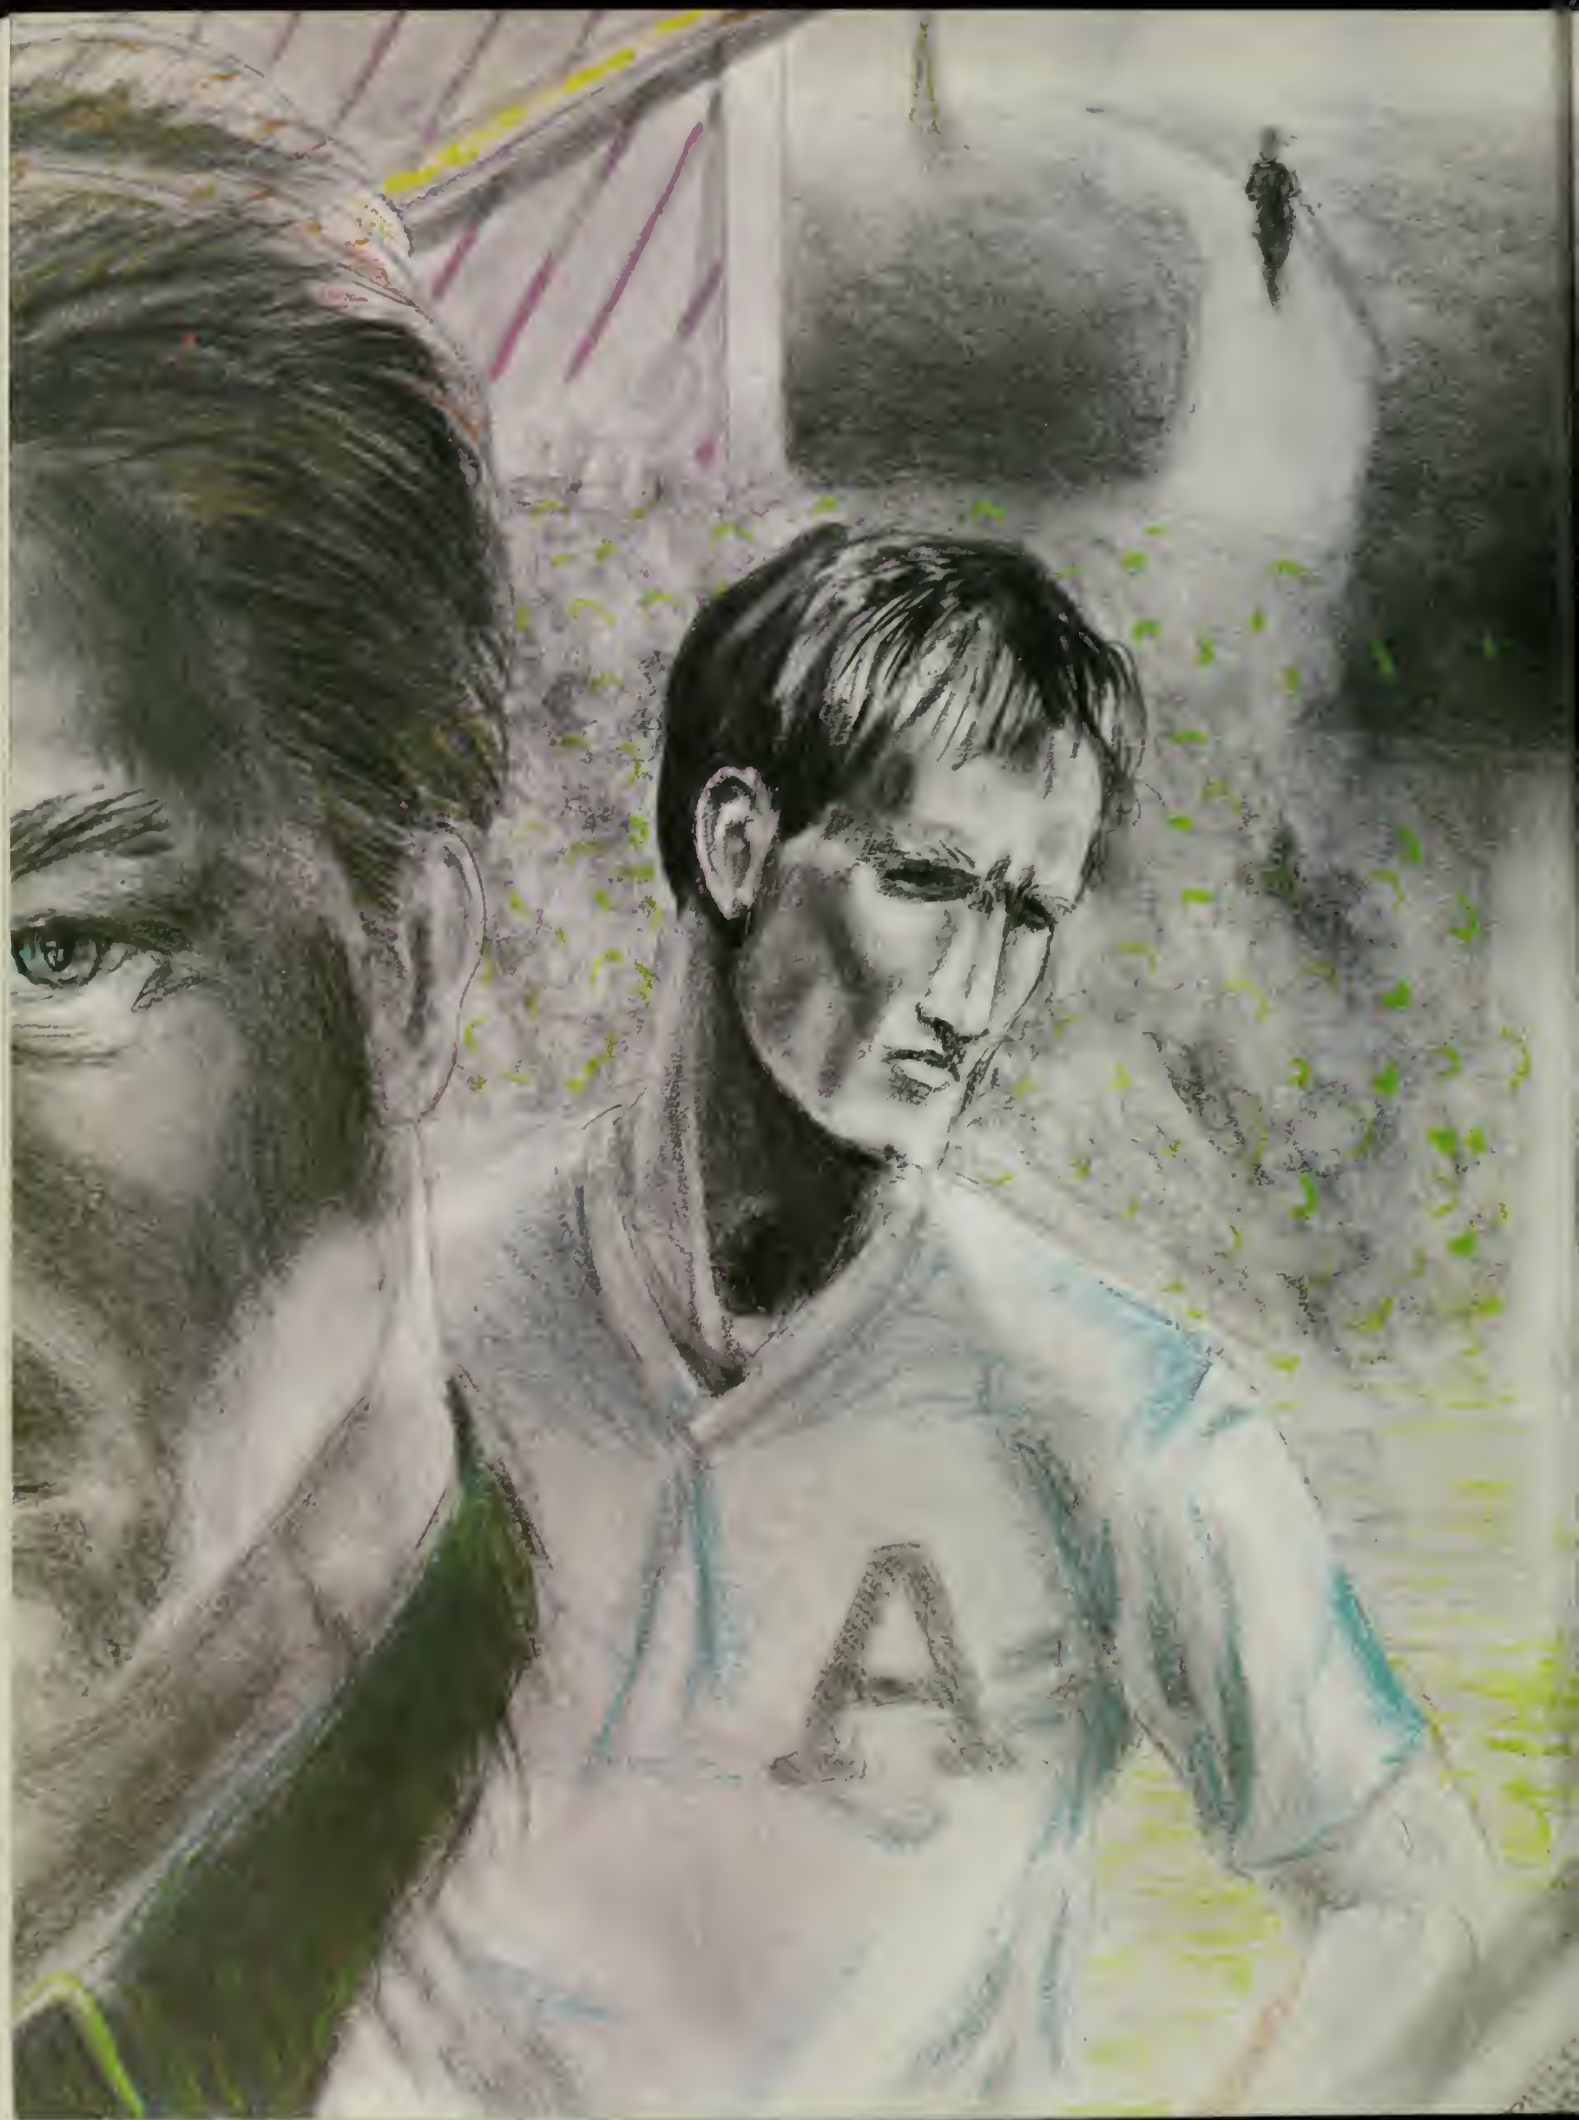

I'm not the editor. The editor is in California. I'm just making a 400 page book called Pot Pourri. So blame the guy who was supposed to be the editor if you don't like what you see — but don't even bother judging it; that won't get you anywhere. Look at it: reminisce a little, laugh, cry, feel offended, enjoy. Emotions are supposed to be okay . . . remember? Then again, that goes way back. We're taught to suppress negative emotions and live in positive ones. Things don't work that way.

I didn't want to write these corny parting words anyway. I feel as if the paper should be tear stained, but that is negative emotion — BOZO NO NO. Let's talk perfection. A utopia would have no yearbooks. They cause too much grief, cost too much, and bring back memories that shouldn't be tampered with. But this ain't Never Never Land. We're in Kansas, Toto! Maybe Kansas is Utopia; maybe this book is perfect. I won't argue. For all the work we've put into it it's worth perfection. I'll take the credit after all — I am the Editor!
